

School Children Back to Studies After Vacation

After two weeks of vacation the majority of Omaha schools opened this morning.

As a precautionary measure on the reopening of school a general medical inspection was held in Central High school, with Charlotte Townsend, as chief of the nurses, in charge. No contagious diseases were found. Three cases of tonsillitis were discovered. Four cases of smallpox were reported in the district of Howard Kennedy school.

Pupils of Comenius public school had an extra day's vacation today, in order that teachers might attend the funeral of Miss Mary Thompson, primary teacher at that school who died Saturday morning.
