

Howard Kennedy School Girl Asks Kindness for Birds of the Spring

Poster of Amella Abendroth.

With the coming of the spring birds, Amella Abendroth, 13 years old, a seventh B grade pupil at Howard Kennedy school, asks that every one be kind to these feathered friends. This poster submitted in the "Be Kind to Animals," contest for the Nebraska Humane society, is very lovely in its original coloring and sentiment. Of course you know that the blue birds have come back, and five of them have gathered at the bird drinking fountain. Five other little warblers are picking crumbs on the ground.

There is a very complete bird house on the bough of the tree, and nearby sits a saucy little red bird.

Who wouldn't be kind to birds, when they sing so gaily and are so happy?

One week remains in which seventh and eighth grade and high school students may put the finishing touches on their posters, as the contest will close Saturday, April 5. All posters should be delivered to W. W. Bradley, head of the Humane society in the city hall. A record is being kept of every child who makes a poster.

Mole, seal and lapin were the principal furs used in unique but conservative manner on fall coats received from Paris model houses.
