

Five-Year-Olds Win

Friday night Howard Kennedy School had its big carnival.

The youngsters had been preparing for the big night for a long time. There were fortune-telling booths, fishing contests, popcorn and a coronation ceremony for the king and queen of the school.

During last week they had a popularity contest, and who do you suppose won?

Two little 5-year-olds in the kindergarten were chosen. Marva Johnson was crowned Queen of the school, and Streeter Turner was made the King.

Mrs. Laura Heacock, the principal, said the money raised would go toward the purchase of a movie projector so the children could use the fine films that are available for education aids.
