

Boy Hints Car Got Worst of Crash

Mitchell Pinkard, six, is probably one of the toughest men to come out of the West. He didn't even cry after he and an automobile collided.

Why, Mitch hinted at Childrens Memorial Hospital last week, it was really the car that took the beating.

And when Rescue Squad men put him into their truck, there wasn't anything resembling dew in Mitchell Pinkard's eye. No, sir.

At least the Texas-born first grader would not admit it. In fact, he was pretty bease about the mishap on April 21.

The fact that his shoes flew off upon impact seem to overshadow a broken leg which now is in traction.

But Mitch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Pinkard of 2712 Maple Street, has vowed to be careful on his way from Howard Kennedy School in the days to come.

Meanwhile, he has cast an appreciative glance around Childrens and decided that:

"I like the popcicles and pop here."
