

Evelyn Montgomery Upped in School Post

"All that I am today, I owe to my family—my husband and parents—, and my friends and co-workers," reflected Evelyn Trigg Montgomery following announcement by School Supt. Owen A. Knutzen of her promotion to an assistant in curriculum development.

"Without their help, encouragement and faith in me, nothing could have been possible," she humbly commented.

The past year she has worked as curriculum intern under Dr. Craig Fullerton, assistant superintendent in charge of instruction.

Thirty-nine years old, Mrs. Montgomery was a classroom teacher at Howard-Kennedy School for 17 years and a reading specialist and teacher consultant for Title I schools for two years.

A native Omahan—member of the well-known, multi-generation Lawson family—, she has had all her schooling locally.

She attended Howard Kennedy School, graduated from Central High and has bachelor of arts and masters of arts degrees from the University of Omaha.

She is married to Darwin Montgomery, engineer at the Omaha U. S. Post Office. They have one son, Darwin, who is a senior at Central High.
